Another Reconstruction Bill Adopted by the Committee.

All Power in the Cremises Withdrawn from the President and Vested in the General of the Army.

Debate in Executive Session on the Removal of Secretary Stanton.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11, 1868, 1 41:30 o'Clock P. M.

The Case of the Removal of Secretary Stanton Under Consideration in the Executive Session of the Senate.

The executive session of the Senate to-day was both prolonged and interesting. Senator Buckalew moved a the commencement that the reporter be called in and the proceedings given to the public. The motion was negatived by an almost strictly radical party vote. Sepator Declittle then began his speech in support of the minority report, which was submitted in printed form, defending the President and animadverting on caustic terms upon the course pursued by his War Minister, Secretary Stanton, while nected with the Cabinet. Mr. Boolittle showed that the President's message in reference to Stanton was divested of the least color of projudice or exaggeration, and gave in the simplest form the soundest reasons for adopting the course he did. He drew especial attention to the official copy appended to his report of the telegram sent by General Baird to Secretary Stanton, it nich the words "at once" appear, and not interpolated, as Senator Howard's published report would deceive the public into believing. The Senator continued t considerable length, his speech occupying an hour in the delivery.

Senator Buckalew followed in a strong and earness emphasis on the baseness of the effort made to faster upon the President the charge of having interpolated that portion of General Baird's despatch requesting Secretary Stanton to telegraph an answer "at once" as to what course he should take in reference to the convention assembled at New Orleans. The copy of the despatch was on file in the War Department containing the words, "Please instruct me by telegraph at once. Yet the Senator from Michigan had allowed his report to go forth to the world with these two very important words omitted, and giving the impression that Secretary Stanton was not called upon to furnish a reply immedi-

Mr. Howard here acknowledged that he omitted to make allusion to it in his completed report, and endeavored to cast the blame upon the reporters, whom be characterized the day previous as delinquents to Senator Buckalew continued, and said it would be only an act of justice to all concerned if the minority report submitted by Senator Doolistle should be given to the public as well as Senator Howard's. He was followed by Senator Dixon, who had not gone far when a motion to adjourn was made, to which Mr. Dixon gave way, and the debate was, in contequence postponed till Monday. Another Reconstruction Bill.

this morning, and after some discussion it was agreed to report the following bill, which will be laid before the the operation of the previous question :-

Mr. Stevens, it is stated, was decidedly opposed to the bill, and during the consultation wanted some provision adopted by which the Congressional representation of the Southern States would be increased to the extent of ten on a wider basis than that which now prevails. It is not improbable that an effort will be made to pass the bill on Monday, under the operation of the previous Constitutionality of the Reconstruction Acts. [Washington correspondence (Jan. 9) Boston Advertiser.] There are so many wild sensational stories afloat about the Supreme Court and the Reconstruction acts that it seems impossible to make a careful stateme of more in detail than any that has yet appeared. There are, as was stated last night, but three cases of witness of the constitutionality of these acts is even indirectly involved. The cotton case already mentioned was argued to-day, and will probably be decided some time next month. The decision may, perhaps, touch upon or or two points of the Congressional policy, but *Antewor it be it cannot affect the, general scope of the, reconstruction laws. The West Virginia case cannot be reached for two or three months, and it's not Jee possible to tell exactly what issue it will present. The other case of the three is docketed as see parte in the matter of William McCardie. It comes up from Mississippi on the refusal of the district judge to granta wire of habes corpus for the reason that the Reconstruction act prevented. Its present position on the docket is such that it cannot be reached under two years.

Judge Black field a motion two weeks ago to bring it forward and set an early day for its hearing, and to-day was fixed for taking up this motion. At the appointed time Judge Black called it to the attention of the cours, when the Attorney General asked that the question be postponed until the arrival of certain interested parties from Mississippi, and it was accordingly put over. These persons are expected in the course of ten days, and when they arrive Judge Black says he will agan ask the court to hear him in support of his motion to bring the case forward. He expressed confidence that the court will grant his proposition and name some day next month for hearing the case. Eminent lawyers in Congress believe his motion will be refused. If it is granted and a day next month fixed for hearing the Indignation of the Radicals Against General Habcock—Lawsuit Against General Terry.

[From the Evening Teigram of yesterday.]

The late order of General Habcock referring jurisdiction in all cases to the civil courts creates great indignation here among the radical members of Congress. They say he is ruined beyond the possibility of retrieving himself in the estimation of the loyal people of the country. It is seriously agitated to compass his dismissal from the army, and to effect this object it is suggested to introduce a bill for the further reduction of the army and discharge of junior officers in high command.

Most of the members of the Indian Peace Commission Board are still in the city. General Sherman is stopping with his brother, the Senator.

General Terry is forced to remain and answer tea suit brought against him by a person from Virginia. It seems when the General was in command at Richmond two citizens laid claim to a piece of land, one under a lease from the rebel owner and the other under a lease granted by an agent of the United States Treasury. The latter was put in possession by the General's order. The former claimant, in consequence, brings his suit against the General.

Mr. Van Winke, (rep.) of W. Va., presented a petition of citizens of Parkersburg, West Virginia, for interposition of the United States government in behalf of persons held for trial as Fenians.

The Constitutional anemoment resolution proposed by the Thirty-unith Congress, known as article fouriers, having the Thirty-unith Congress, known as article fouriers, having already been adopted by twenty-two States (reciting their names); and whereas by the constitution an amendment duly proposed and raticle by three-fouries of the States is declared valid; therefore Resolved, that said amendment, having received the requisite ratification, is valid to all inlents and purposes.

Mr. Sunner said to seemed important that the country should know whether that article is valid as a part of the constitution or not. He thought there was no question of its vanidity, and that if was their dury rather than that of any other branch of the government, it had been the custom neresofore for the Secretary of State to certify the ratification. In his opinion it came properly within the cognizance of Congress. Referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Gennes, (rep.) of John, introduced a resolution that the secretary of the Navy be requested to suspend until further action of Congress all payments to officers of the may on the retired and reserved last promoted under the act of March, 1867, except such as they were entitled to at the time they were placed thoreon and at the time of the passage of said act. ## HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11, 1867. The STEARER presented the acts of the Territorial Legislature of Arizona. Referred to the Committee on Territories.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. Dawes in the chair, for general debate on the President's annual message.

He declared that the spirit of that speech was unworthy of any sian laying claim to an elevated civilization. The policy which should be pursued to that race was a question when should engage the attention of all wise and good men, and it was unphilosophical and wicked to disturb that question by the influence of partisan prejudice of partisan ambition.

New York might be taken as a representative city of the United States, and he would take the average nusiness of that city for the past eleven years. The business of the country last year was four times in excess of that done in the great speculative year of 1857, six times in excess of 1858 and five times ereater than in 1851. hav of impeachment. Referring to the general subject, be declared that the President was obstructing the execution of the law. Under the fear of impeachment the President had appointed true men as commanders in the South; but when that fear vanished he snubbed Grant, removed Stanton, abught to disgrace the dauntless Sheridan, struck the epatiettes from the hebring Sickles and brought of and Pope to the sneet fate. If the President wearled the people is the adoption of his policy, and if all the fruits of the adoption of his policy, and if all the fruits of the war were lost, members who voide against impeachment would have only themselves to blame. Referring to the speech of Mr. Brooks on the inferiority of the negro race, he said that that gentleman had told the House of the curls in the negro's hair, the thickness of his lips, the size of his nose, the shape of his jaw, and had even got down into the dust and measured the length of his heel. He had made no objection on the ground of color, as there were many colors among men; but the distinction seemed to be one of heels. If that was to be the standard of suffrage his colleague should be appointed a committee to adjust a scale of rights on that basis. But the blacks had the suffrage now, and would not surrender it. Wost to the man or party that sought to wrest it from them. He appealed to the opposition to rise above the mere party level and ald the republicans in restoring peace to the country. The South was starving; hundreds of thousands of Northern laborers were out of work, besiness was duit, capital timid and finances disordered. Sound reconstruction was needed at once. On it all other questions hinged. With that accomplished the work of lessening the public mind. It might become the duty of Congress to make some authoritative and explicit declaration on the subject. Every nation being the equal of every other nation and having the absolute and unquestioned control of its own domestic policy had necessarily the right to regulate the principles on which its citizenship might be acquired or lost. The right of expateriation was an original God given right, and was that in which the American nation had its birth. When American citizenship was once conferred no other nation had a right to question its completeness. If aliens did not, when naturalized, become divested of all other aliengiance, then the absurdity would follow that such persons owed a twofold allegiance. He was, bowever unfortunately compelled to coafers that the practice of the government and the writings of American publicists had not been in harmony with his opinion; for even Chancellor Kent had laid down the dutum that an American citizen had no right to expatriate himself and become the subject or citizen of another country. This, however, he attributed to the too great respect evinced in the United States for English jurisprutance. Still he did not mean to assert that if certain duties and obligations became by the laws of a country attached to an individual, that individual did not by expatriation discharge himself of them; but when persons, innocent of crime and free from obligations, came to the United States and were admitted to citizenship, it was cowardly in the nation when they returned to the country of their nationality to auffar them to be denied those rights which were accorded to the citizens or subjects of other nations. It became the country, not by the vair ceremony of a law of Congress, to make good to naturalized citizens the rights guarantied to them, but it was the duty of Congress to put into the hands of the Executive the power necessary to vindicate those rights. Let this be done, and Great Britain and every other nation, even if not conceding the principle, would at least concede the power of the United States, and would cease to attempt those outrages on American citteens which had lately aroused not only the American people, but the friends of the country all over the earth. This should be done not as a threat, but with diganty, with thraness, with vehemence, and await

AMUSEMENTS.

MADAME RISTORI,-The "Marie Antomette" matince at the French Theatre yesterday presented a scene of which day performances rarely present a counterpart in numbers and the interest taken in the performance. There will be two more matures during the coming week, the closing one of Ristori's season; one en Wednesday, when ''Elizabeth'' will be given, and another on Saturday, the farewell performance of the great tragedienne, "Norma" will be played for the first and only time on Thursday night, and on the Tuesday of next week, 21st inst, Ristori will pay her parting respects to the people of Brooklyn.

Invine Hall.—The first concert of the National Conservatory of Music took place last night before an immense audience. Pattison played one of his new pieces, "Soirée and Ball," introduction and grand polka, in a par-ticularly brilliant style, and the tenes of the grand plane were brought out with almost an organ degree of power. In this work Mr. Pattison would do well to cut out the cadenzas in the introduction and middle; for they completely spoil the rattling, spirited character of the polks. Miss Jo nie Ball saug the belero from the "Sicilian Ves-pers," and showed that she has a fine voice, which may place her in an enviable position on the concert stage. But such a piece as the beloro is unsuited to her, and therefore she failed in it. In the ballad which she sang as an encore she was very successful. The other artiste-were Severial, Poznanski, and Misses Fease and Wells two promising pupils of the Conservatory. The persor who presided at the piane as conductor was especially unfitted for the position; for he did not assist the artiste-much in the r solos.

THE FRENCH THEATRE. - The interesting two act come. dy "Le Testament de César Girodot" attracted a large audience to the above theatre last evening. The after-pic e was "La Corde Sensible." Madame Larmet, Mile-Juiana and Mr. Rousseau distinguished themselves in their respective roles.

The accused, it is said, were to winerd, Long Island. The accused, it is said, were to have appeared as witnesses on behalf of Alexander Cochard, who was to have been tried for the same crime. As they did not appear Cochard pleaded guilty, and then gave information which led to the arrest of the accused. They were taken before Commissioner Newton, when Bernard stated that he was in Cochard's employ, and that he threatened to shoot him if he did not print the currency. The accused were remanded to the Penitentiary to await trial.
